20th Century European History. The Department of History at the University of California, Davis, seeks to hire a mid-career historian of twentieth-century Europe. Applicants should possess specialist credentials at the international, transnational, or comparative level, and deal substantively with such research subjects as European political and economic integration, international migration, European imperialism and post-colonial relations, post-Communist developments in eastern and Balkan Europe, comparative social movements and social policy, comparative gender relations, or international relations and warfare. Multilingual research programs are of special interest. Competence to teach upper-division surveys of twentieth-century European history is essential.

The appointment is intended to be made at the associate professor rank, but the possibility of an appointment at the advanced assistant professor level is also open. Submission of letters of application and recommendation by November 30 will assure consideration. Inquiries and applications should be directed to Professor William Hagen, Chair, Twentieth-Century European Search Committee, Department of History, University of California, Davis, Davis CA 95616.

U.C. Davis is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer with a strong institutional commitment to the development of a climate that supports equality of opportunity and respect for differences.