was required of a greater number of students, as well as greater numbers of students. He added that in the fall of 1947, the President had a second session of the Discipline, the second session of the Committee on 16-94, which resulted in the resignation of the 3rd member, and the formation of a new and stronger faculty. To the best of the President's knowledge, this was the first time in the history of the College that such a session of the Committee had been held.

The President, Mr. Richard T. Dana, further explained that the President believed that it was the duty of the President to see that the facilities of the College were used to their fullest potential, and that the College should be responsible for the education of its students. He further stated that the President believed that the College should be open to all students, regardless of their background, and that the College should be responsible for the education of its students, not their parents.

The President also stated that he was pleased with the progress that had been made in the past year, and that he believed that the College was in a strong position to continue its growth and development. He further stated that he believed that the College should continue to be a leader in the field of higher education, and that it should be responsible for the education of its students, not
their parents.

The President concluded his remarks by stating that he believed that the College was in a strong position to continue its growth and development, and that he believed that the College should continue to be a leader in the field of higher education, and that it should be responsible for the education of its students, not their parents.

His character, and his abilities for the position, recommended him, and he was appointed to the new post of President. His appointment was universally approved, and the change was hailed with enthusiasm. President Dunster and his brother, C. C. Dunster, were both active and influential in Harvard University, and their presence was greatly missed when they left. The new President was to be a man of great capacity, and he was expected to bring a new era of prosperity to the institution.

THE PRINTING PRESS.

a few years later, the printing plants of the college were in a better state of repair, and the output of the press was increased. The press was moved to a new location, and the facilities were expanded. The press was now capable of printing more books and journals, and the quality of the printing was improved. The press was now the center of the college's publishing activities, and it was a symbol of the college's commitment to disseminating knowledge.
