God, Evolution, and Agape: Ethics and the Limits of Naturalistic Explanation

A lecture presented by
Timothy Jackson,
Associate Professor of Christian Ethics,
Emory University and Visiting Professor,
Harvard Divinity School for Spring 2006

5 PM, Thursday, May 4, 2006
Sperry Room, Andover Hall
Harvard Divinity School
45 Francis Avenue

This presentation is the sixth in a series of lectures sponsored by the Evolution and Theology of Cooperation Project at Harvard University, directed by Professors Sarah Coakley and Martin Nowak and supported by a grant from the John Templeton Foundation. For more information contact Amy Ashbacher at ashbach@fas.harvard.edu or visit www.fas.harvard.edu/~etc.

Please see our website for upcoming events sponsored by the Evolution and Theology of Cooperation Project beginning in Fall 2006 (www.fas.harvard.edu/~etc)